DALLAS, April 8, 2013 /PRNewswire/ -- McKool Smith has secured a $15 million patent infringement verdict on behalf of Dallas, Texas-based Summit 6 LLC against Samsung Electronics Co. Ltd. and Samsung Telecommunications America, Inc.

The verdict was handed down on April 5, 2013 after a six-day jury trial before Judge Reed O'Connor in the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Texas. The jury found that Samsung infringed Summit 6's patented media uploading technology, U.S. Patent No. 7,765,482, which covers software that automatically processes digital photos before they are transmitted over a network by client devices, such as cell phones. Summit 6 accused Samsung phones that support MMS photo messaging of infringement.

The trial team representing Summit 6 included McKool Smith attorneys Ted Stevenson, John Campbell, Phillip Aurentz, Ashley Moore, Mitchell Sibley, Richard Kamprath, James Quigley, and Kat Li, and Bradley Caldwell of the Caldwell Cassady & Curry firm.

"The jury's verdict affirms that Summit 6's innovations are both novel and valuable," said Ted Stevenson, lead trial counsel for Summit 6. "Along with our client, we are pleased with the verdict."
